Frequently Asked Questions about the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA)

What is the FAFSA?

The Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA) is the online application that allows a student to apply simultaneously for federal student aid (including the Pell Grant, work-study opportunities, and federal student loans). Many colleges and universities also use it for their scholarship programs as well.

Isn't the application too long and difficult to complete?

Most applicants complete the FAFSA in 30 minutes or less. If you have questions, talk to your school counselor. Help is also available for FREE from Alabama Possible (www.alabamapossible.org)

If I want to learn a trade, can the FAFSA still be of assistance to me?

The FAFSA is not just for associate's or bachelor's degree programs. Students may receive need-based Pell grants, federal student loans, and other federal student aid, including career and technical education programs at community colleges and at many other schools and training programs. Students may check with the school they want to attend or use the federal government's online College Navigator tool to find out which institutions participate in the programs: https://nces.ed.gov/collegenavigator/.

Does my family make too much money to benefit from the FAFSA?

Financial aid is left on the table every year by students who did not apply because they erroneously thought they were ineligible. You really don't know until you apply! Income and assets are factors in determining your eligibility, but so are things like the number of students in the family who are in school and the age of the parent(s). For students from families that do make too much to qualify for need-based grant aid, the FAFSA may still be helpful, since it's needed for work-study, or a federal student loan. Your college may offer aid based on your FAFSA info too, and your eligibility may be different depending on your school. Additionally, some scholarship programs use information from the FAFSA as part of the application process. As most financial aid is awarded in date order based on FAFSA filing date, it is a very good idea to complete the FAFSA as early as possible. Your "place in line" may be used for opportunities that come up later, and also may be used if family financial circumstances suddenly change.

What if I don't want a student loan?

Filing the application does not commit you to anything. You will just find out whether you might be eligible for aid!

How is FAFSA data protected?

I don't want my information sold, and I don't want my school to have it. By law, your personally identifiable Information (PII) included in the FAFSA may only be used in furtherance of administering financial aid, including research. Although your high school will know whether you completed the FAFSA, it will not have access to the information that you provide on your FAFSA.

If I choose to file an application, how will I know that my application is complete?

Once you submit the FAFSA, you will receive a confirmation of receipt at the email address you provided in the application. This will allow you to demonstrate that you've met the requirement of filing an application even if there are circumstances that will need to be addressed with the college/university's financial aid office later.
